

ALCB rejects liquor for Drayton Valley pool parties

By Frank Ryan

Beer and wine will not be allowed at the Park Valley indoor swimming pool in Drayton Valley.

A spokesman for the Alberta Liquor Control Board (ALCB) told The Western Review that the swimming pool is not a suitable permit location.

And anyone caught taking liquor into the swimming pool faces charges from the RCMP.

Two weeks ago town council decided that groups renting the facility would be allowed to take beer and wine along with their snacks into the viewing area at the pool.

Council was told that beer and wine had been allowed on three occasions as part of an experiment.

Without checking with the authorities, council endorsed the use of beer and wine at the pool.

The ALCB makes it clear. A permit won't be issued to anyone for the purpose of taking liquor into a swimming pool.

Councillor Tom McGee, who voted in favor of the idea at the last council meeting, was upset with an editorial that appeared in The Western Review last week.

He called it a poor editorial.

In his comments to council, McGee said, "If we don't allow liquor, rentals will be affected."

McGee told the recreation board meeting last Wednesday night that the chocolate bar machine at the swimming pool (which was referred to in The Western Review editorial) was removed because of the mess it would create and the hassles involved in making change.

The councillor stated that he had rented the pool where liquor was involved and had a ball.

It was at this point in his presentation that RCMP Staff Sgt. Les Bannerman, who is a member of the recreation board, cautioned McGee on his comments.

Bannerman told the board that the issue, raised in The Western Review, had been addressed by the RCMP and they also found out the ALCB would not issue a permit.

Mayor Bob Mayhew stated that the town had good intentions in going with the beer and wine. "We had a number of requests and we just tried to accommodate those requests," he stated.

Board chairman Jane Kwas wanted to know what would happen if someone went to the swimming pool with booze.

Bannerman replied that an impaired charge would be laid.

Ed Haykowi, west end co-ordinator with Parkland County who attends the recreation meetings, said he hasn't seen a pool without dispensers.

The remark was likely made in reference to the chocolate bar machine which was removed and a pop machine that is usually out of order at the pool.

Senior Games decision expected

A decision is expected today (Wednesday) on the site of the 1986 Alberta Senior Games.

Les Bannerman, chairman of the host committee, told the recreation board last week that the issue would be resolved today. Bannerman stated that it was still questionable as to which way the games decision would go.

Last year the Alberta Sports Council (ASC) awarded the three-day senior games to Drayton Valley. Now, the host committee say they need additional funding to put on the games.

Under the original terms of the bid the host committee was to receive $125,000. The request which the ASC is now facing calls for an additional $107,000.

The additional money Drayton Valley has asked for includes $82,000 to cover the difference in food and accommodation between the '86 site and Camrose who hosted the last senior games. The remaining $25,000 is for a second legacy that could be spent on administration.

Since the ASC met two weeks ago Max Gibb has indicated that the Summer Games scheduled for August in Fort McMurray are on his priority list and a decision on the Drayton Valley situation will have to wait.

But, as Les Bannerman indicated to the recreation board, his committee is finished waiting. It's decision time.

Paper honored

The Western Review has won three major awards in the Canadian Community Newspaper Association annual competition.

The weekly paper took second place for best editorial page and second for best front page. Last year The Western Review placed third in the best front page category.

And The Western Review was also awarded a Blue Ribbon award for placing in the top one-third in general excellence in the tabloid class.

Grad party considered a success

By Neil Speers
This year's grad party was an outstanding success by all accounts.

According to Cpl. Tom Turner of the Drayton Valley RCMP, there were no complaints on the weekend related to the grad party.

It was the "first time in the four years I've been here" there were no major injuries or damage, he commented.

While he was at the party site last Saturday, a few car loads of people tried to crash the party, but "they soon saw the wisdom of leaving," Turner said.

"It (the party) was handled very admirably by the Kinamen," stated Turner.

Alex Blais of the Kinamen said "from our point of view it was good."

There were seven busloads of students who went to the party, which Blais figures added up close to 300 people.

Blais said there were only a few minor incidents such as one young man who cut his hand.

After being stitched up in town, he returned to the party commented Blais.

There were eight cars waiting to take the students home again once the party started. And according to Blais, the drivers were "kept too busy to relax."

The cars drove "about 1600 kilometres that night," said Blais.

Colleen Moros, spokesman for the students, said "everything went really good."

They even "had champagne at 12 (midnight)," she explained.

The students had also arranged an old circus tent for the site, but they "didn't even use it, it was so nice out there," commented Moros.

She added the feedback from the partiers since has been very positive, and it looks like they will do it again next year.

Blais said the grads seemed very happy with the arrangement.

"They all thanked us...some even wanted to tip us."

Frank Madock celebrates 92nd birthday

By Frank Ryan
Frank Madock celebrated his 92nd birthday last Thursday at his farm south of Entwistle.

Madock, who was born in England, came to Canada in 1912.

Frank Madock

"We landed in New Brunswick and came out west to Edmonton. It was known as the 'land of free farms'," he explained.

"At that time we had an idea of going up north where Smoky Lake is today. But it was horse and buggy in those days and the trip would take 1 1/2 days. Plus, there wasn't much money," Madock stated.

Instead the Madocks took the advice of the man in the Edmonton land office and moved to Entwistle.

For 30 years Frank Madock was chairman of the Stony Plain school division.

"The first time I went to Drayton Valley they had a one-room school house, across from where Mayhew Motors is today," Madock explained.

In those days Drayton Valley was called Powerhouse.

It was because of Frank Madock's position in the school division and what he did for education that the high school in Drayton Valley was named after him.

"The good people of Drayton Valley requested the school be named after me," he explains how things happened.

Frank Madock lost a good friend earlier this year when Richie Woods, principal at Frank Madock High School, passed away suddenly.

It was an awful shock when I heard he died in his sleep," Madock said with a tear in his eye.

"I tried to get hold of him three or four days before he died, but he was always busy in the community," Madock added.

Frank Madock was instrumental in getting Richie Woods to take the principal's job at the Frank Madock High School.

"I suggested to the board they couldn't get a better man. He was a good principal," he added.

Due to a bad left knee, Frank Madock Sr won't be able to attend the school's 25th reunion next weekend in Drayton Valley.

Spring values are popping up all over in the Classifieds.

Zoazirny cuts ribbon

Amoco-Team carries out well laid plan for moving

By Lorne Christensen

"I love it when a plan comes together," With those words made famous by the Colonel Hannibal Smith on the television's A-Team, Amoco's district superintendent Wayne Heth concluded the opening ceremonies of their new $3 million building.

Amoco officially opened the doors on its new office in Drayton Valley last Friday.

Provincial Energy Minister John Zoazirny cut the ribbon in the opening ceremonies as about 250 people looked on.

Local MLA Shirley Cripps, Mayor Bob Mayhew, Reeve Maurice McCullagh and representatives from the planning and construction firms for the facility also participated in the ceremonies.

Zoazirny said the building reflected the energy industry's confidence in what was coming in the future with the new energy deal.

"I would like to pay tribute to Norman Rubash and all the people of the industry that worked so hard for that deal," he added.

Rubash, the president of Amoco, in turn praised the company's employees for their "exemplary patience" during the years in the old buildings.

Local MLA Shirley Cripps echoed the statements of Zoazirny in saying that the new 34,000-square-foot building showed the confidence Amoco had in the area.

"Amoco and Drayton Valley have mutual respect for each other," Cripps said.

Reeve Maurice McCullagh and Mayor Bob Mayhew presented plaques to Amoco in addition to the architects who presented a painting and the original shovel used in the ground breaking presented by Rocky Forest, from Forest Contract Management.

Besides the dignitaries and other people present another 700 people toured the building during the open house held later in the afternoon, according to Larry Poffenroth, district supervisor for Amoco.

John Zoazirny cuts the ribbon while Shirley Cripps looks on. Assisting Zoazirny are Norman Rubash and Maurice McCullagh.

Hefty price tag for games is major issue

A $107,000 decision is expected to be made today (Wednesday) that could have long-lasting effects on Drayton Valley.

The $107,000 represents the amount the host town for the 1986 Alberta Senior Games is requesting from the provincial government to proceed with the two-day games that are expected to attract 800 people.

Several months ago Drayton Valley was happy to be the host for the games. They submitted a bid which was accepted by Sport Alberta. Costs to host the event should've been clear then.

But now the host committee is saying to Sport Alberta, who is the provincial government representative in this ugly mess, unless we get $107,000 the whole affair is off.

The $107,000 represents the difference in the food and accommodation between Drayton Valley and Camrose where the games were held last. And the host committee, who is already guaranteed $125,000 from Sport Alberta, wants another $25,000 legacy which could be used for anything.

When Drayton Valley bid for the games they had to know it was going to take big bucks. Why is money such an issue now?

What do we want — a Volkswagen or a Cadillac operation?

If the host committee decides to give the games back, Drayton Valley and area residents could pay for that decision for years to come.

How favorably will other agencies look upon Drayton Valley and area as hosts for any event, if they drop the 1986 Alberta Senior Games?

When the host committee meet today, let's hope they give serious thought to their decision. It could affect us all.

Western Review cartoonist wins award

Some people will do anything for a photo.

The Western Review's Lorne Christensen rode with Mayerthorpe pony chuckwagon driver Duane Johner during the recent Evergreen rodeo wagon races.

The wagon people were very cooperative, and while the bottom of the wagon was padded with foam for the twists and turns through the barrels, Christensen was tossed around pretty good.

One of his excellent photos from back of the driver was featured on our rodeo/parade page last week.

Being creative in his photography is not the only thing Lorne Christensen does.

Last week his first of what we hope will be a long line of outstanding CARTOONS appeared on our opinions page.

For several years Christensen has supplied cartoons to the Innisfail Province. In the recent Canadian Community

Editor's Notes

Newspaper Association awards, one of Christensen's cartoons placed second in all of Canada.

Congratulations Lorne.

Dr. John Hunter, a Drayton Valley chiropractor, sent along a note this week informing all of us that this is Spinal Care Month.

VOLUNTEERS are still needed to help with the Frank Maddock High School reunion June 28-30. If you're going to be home that weekend and can lend a hand, call Danny Thompson at 542-5181.

Drayton Valley Lions rodeo chairman Ken Gremm reports that receipts were down this year. The weatherman is being blamed for poor attendance.

And while some people say the parade was smaller than usual, a bouquet to all those who participated.

THANKS to Deborah Fleden of Drayton Valley for the Father's Day poem. It's just the type of thing we're looking for.

How about that marathon article on Frank Maddock teacher Rick Watrich last week? We wish him all the best.

Imagine hearing the announcer at the Boston marathon saying, "School teacher Rick Watrich of Drayton Valley, Alberta!"

The only major problem I have with the story is that reporter Lorne Christensen wants to cover the Boston marathon.

Brazeau-Pembina

Eastern Slopes Policy questioned at public meeting

Panel meets with residents from Drayton Valley area

Concerns over why the Eastern Slopes policy has been changed came out at a public forum on the Integrated Resource Plan for the Brazeau-Pembina area.

At the meeting, held at the Legion in Drayton Valley last week where about 40 people attended, Wally Heinrichs said the Alberta government promised in 1975 a "minimum of 70 per cent of provincial land will be maintained in wilderness areas."

"What I see is a betrayal of this," Heinrichs stated.

He commented how at that time, the government asked the residents of the province what should be done, and the response was for preservation.

The latest revision of the resource plan now allows for resource activity in areas which had been set aside, he said.

Heinrichs added only the Kananaskis area "has been clearly protected."

Stephen Stiles, chairman of the panel, responded saying the "original Eastern Slopes policy was to stop what was happening until further study could be done."

He agreed how "people did not want uncontrolled development" but the government "never considered the whole of the Eastern Slopes would be one large reserve."

The varied interests in the resources of the area "demands integrated planning," Stiles commented.

Heinrichs then came back, stressing how he feels the "planning now shows more concern with economic development" than with conservation of wildlife.

Stiles explained "I don't think there is any intention to abandon forests, or abandon scenic views, or abandon anything."

But one person in the audience commented on what Stiles said and what the plans say, may be two different things.

Harold Hadley asked the panel how much of a "data base" they had.

"Do we know exactly what the water quality is in all the streams?" he commented.

Hadley was concerned decisions would be made without enough information to make the correct decision.

Brian Fardoe, representing the Resources Evaluation and Planning Division of Energy and Natural Resources on the panel, stated some of the information is in place and there was too much to bring to the meeting. He added more information comes in all the time.

"Reality says you sometimes have to make decisions on what you have," he stressed.

Other concerns at the meeting included Clay Wickstrom's worries over increased restrictions on where ATVs and snowmobiles can go.

Stiles answered Wickstrom's concerns saying "There are thousands of miles of unrestricted cutlines and trails." He added very little of the area would be under restrictions in the future.

Related concerns were raised over the possible use of Designated Vehicle Routes in wilderness areas. Under the plan, a test section of the Brazeau-Pembina planning area would have certain roads which would be allowed for general use, the rest of the roads would be restricted from all but the commercial vehicles such as well servicing crews.

Alder Flats meeting has good response.

Alder Flats meeting

A potential problem in the plans being made for the Rocky-North Saskatchewan area was brought out at a meeting in Alder Flats last week.

Speaking at a public forum on the draft plan of the Integrated Resource Plan for that area, Chris Olsen, a biologist, pointed out a specific problem he sees in the plan.

"You speak of controlling elk numbers if depredation (elk eating farmers' crops) becomes a problem. I say it can't help become anything but a problem. You have put agricultural land between two critical wildlife zones and this has to happen," said Olsen.

The critical wildlife zones indicate the areas are important to the wildlife and have been set aside for it. By classifying the area between the two in question as suitable for agriculture, the farmer who buys the land will almost automatically get elk as well.

Although no real answer was made at the time, the panel will use the information being provided by people such as Olsen when making recommendations in the plan.

Stephen Stiles, chairman of the panel, stressed several times at the previous meeting in Drayton Valley, nothing in the plan is "carved in stone."

Throughout the meetings, the panel alternately addressed issues raised by local residents and describing how the planning process works.

Stiles commented at one point how "research is being done quarter by quarter and that research will be done before any decision can be made" over what the committee recommends be done with the land.

Joan Elmont raised a point considered by many to be an important part of the plan.

"There is only a certain amount of land left. If we keep using it up, there won't be anything left," she commented.

Gerry Thompson, representing the Fish and Wildlife Division of Energy and Natural Resources, commented the original plan in 1977 had 575 square kilometres of critical wildlife zone in the Rocky-North Saskatchewan planning zone. In the 1984 revised version there are 963 square kilometres of the critical wildlife zone.

He also said "there is a fallacy that we only care about wildlife if they are in Zone 2 (critical wildlife)." He pointed out any activity proposed by a company has to take the impact on wildlife into consideration.

Chairman works for meshed views

What do you do with 10 people who have 10 views on how to use one piece of land?

Currently under revision by the Alberta government, the Integrated Resource Plan should "mesh those views and more or less satisfy most of the people," said Stephen Stiles, chairman of the public meetings held to see what the residents of Alberta think should be done with the land.

Until 1977 the government was looking at each proposal it got for uses of areas in the Eastern Slopes separately.

The Eastern Slopes is the foothills region of Alberta from just south of Grande Prairie down to the Canada-U.S. border. About 90,000 square kilometres.

The Eastern Slopes policy was created in 1977 to preserve the resources until further planning could be done.

The plan looks to using the resources as best as possible, but "the object is to not do too much damage as you do it," commented Stiles.

Each region has within it zones which define the possible activities it can be used for. These zones have headings which include prime protection, critical wildlife, special use, general recreation, multiple use, agriculture, industrial and facility.

The revised plan has come under much criticism because it only has the prime protection in the upper elevations of the Rocky Mountains. The next most restrictive — critical wildlife — still allows for roads, logging, petroleum exploration and development, coal exploration and development, and other uses which could harm wildlife.

Stiles explained the prime protection areas are meant for watershed protection, where erosion and maintaining water quality is vital. The critical wildlife areas can have the development, but consideration will be taken as to the effect on the wildlife. He used an example of an oil well. For two years the area will be disrupted. But after that there will be more grazing area for animals such as elk around the well site.

The entire plan is being kept "flexible so change can happen as economic, population and public opinion changes."

Stiles is also a member of the Alberta Integrated Planning Advisory Committee (AIPAC), and the MLA of the Olds-Didsbury constituency.

AIPAC is watching how the plans for regions are being set up, but not necessarily concerned what goes into the plans.

Town praised

Drayton Valley has come a long way, according to Marvin Moore, Minister of Transportation in Alberta.

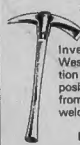

At a luncheon meeting last week, Moore related how several years ago, while he was Minister of Municipal Affairs, he had come to Drayton Valley to stress the need for tightening up the financial problems of the town.

"You've made a lot of progress," he commented.

Platz returns home from Mexico clinic

Jamie Platz will be home tomorrow (Thursday).

The 10-year-old Buck Creek youngster has spent the last three weeks at a clinic in Mexico for the treatment of cancer.

In Mexico Platz was put on a vitamin schedule and a special diet.

During his stay at the clinic his mother stayed at the hospital, where she became familiar with his new lifestyle.

Reports from the family say the youngster is doing very well and feels good.

USE THIS WEEK TO CHANGE THIS YEAR

Each year, 1,000,000 Canadians have boating accidents that probably wouldn't have happened if only they had knowledge of basic boating and water safety. Call the Red Cross for pamphlets and course information during National Water Safety/Safe Boating Week.

Booze out of place

Dear Editor,

I am writing in support of the comments you made regarding beer and wine consumption at the Park Valley Pool.

To me drinking and swimming do not seem to be a compatible or safe combination. Alcoholism is already a major problem in this country. Encouraging it at a family facility is of no benefit to anyone. It is showing young people drinking is acceptable at any occasion. If people cannot afford the pool rentals how can they afford to drink?

This town provides many establishments and functions where a person may have a few drinks. There's no need for it at the pool, it's completely out of place. The speed and suddenness with which council voted this in makes me wonder if perhaps they have been allowing the same privilege at their meetings.

On a higher level our government is making motions to allow drinking in public parks for picnickers. Again, children are learning from a young age drinking is acceptable everywhere. Will council be looking into setting up a beer stand by the tennis courts for the summer months? When it comes to drinking there seems to be no sense of limits.

Can't people enjoy anything without alcohol?

Yours truly
Carolyn Symon

Ridiculous move

Beer instead of bars

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to the beer and wine being allowed at the swimming pool by rental groups.

As stated in the paper, the pool had available pop, bars, etc. and they were removed. I suppose the reason for this was because the council decided they were not good for a person's health.

The statement, "If we don't allow liquor, rentals will be affected" is totally ridiculous. Our children are taught at swimming lessons that liquor and swimming do not mix. Does the council know something that the swim instructors do not? Of the five council members who voted in favor of such a thing, makes me wonder about the votes I gave at the last town election.

I think council should take another strong look at what they have accepted.

Yours truly,
G. Anderson

Old Age poem

Humor applauded

Dear Editor,

Last week's response in letters to the editor regarding 'Old Age is Hell' prompted my letter.

It would seem to me that the frame of mind that one is in when reading the written word can color one's understanding and interpretation.

I enjoyed the poem and had a good laugh over it because only being middle age, some of these symptoms of old age are beginning to show. I imagined the author to have had a grand time writing it, amidst fellow oldtimers' guffaws of "Ain't that the truth!"

I applaud the author, your sense of humor will carry you gracefully to older yet and the best way - with a smile, a chuckle and an understanding that 'Old Age is Hell' but every extra day is a gift from Heaven.

Only one arm

Bridget Pohling excels at several sports

By Lorne Christensen

She steps up to the plate, plants her feet firmly in the loose dirt.

The pitcher hurls the ball and with one stiff swing the batter connects, sending the ball towards the shortstop.

If this sounds familiar, it is, except for one thing. The batter is Bridget Pohling and she only has one arm.

Bridget, who plays third base for the 79er's in the local ladies fastball league, lost her left arm in an accident when she was eight years old.

"My dad owned a butcher shop and I had my hand in a piece of machinery where it shouldn't have been," Bridget explained.

But that doesn't stop her from participating in a variety of sports, including fastball.

"I love to ski (downhill), bike ride and do aerobics," she said.

The 19-year-old, who was born here in Drayton Valley, does not let her disability hold her back.

When she was in junior high school she played on the badminton and also played on the volleyball and basketball teams.

When she got into high school she broke her artificial arm.

"I became comfortable without it and I can do just as well without it," she said.

But time became the limiting factor for Bridget while at Frank Maddock High School and she couldn't get involved in more sports.

Now time has become a limiting factor again for Bridget.

She works at Block Brothers Realty as a secretary-receptionist and has little time to get involved in more than just playing third base for the 79er's.

She has aerobics three nights a week, works two nights and then goes to Weight Watchers for one night a week.

"Right now fastball is about the only sport I can fit in."

She plans to continue playing ball as long as she has the time.

"We play other teams but we don't play in a league," she points out.

She adds that last year she never had the time to play with the team in tournaments. But this year after travelling to a Thorsby tournament Bridget hopes to be able to play in more of them.

Many people would think playing fastball with just one arm would be almost impossible, but not for Bridget who says it "just comes natural."

"A lot of people thought I couldn't move fast enough catching it and throwing it again," Bridget added, "but I sure try hard."

Bridget Pohling demonstrates her fielding and batting skills.

Frank Maddock teacher

Former athlete, Strangway loves to coach track team

Rod Strangway has an impressive list of sporting accomplishments to his name.

At 22, the business and physical education teacher at Frank Maddock High School, is continuing his participation in sports through coaching.

In 1980 he won the all-around novice male gymnastics championship in Alberta. In addition to his personal victory came a team victory when his training partners from Stettler captured the second and third places in the competition.

But Strangway's involvement in sports goes far beyond the gymnastics. He also participated in hockey and was a running back in high school. The offers he got to go to junior camps he says he took as a joke.

In addition to this he pitched on a team that won the bantam provincial baseball title.

But now Strangway has turned his love for sports into another aspect, coaching. He, along with Rick Watrich, is working with the track team at Frank Maddock. In the past he had helped with the track team at the school he was student-teaching in.

His stay in Drayton Valley has been short lived so far. He graduated from the University of Alberta on April 26 and three days later began teaching at Frank Maddock.

His wife Laura is still enrolled at the university taking her third year in an education degree. Strangway took his first two years at Red Deer College, where he assisted teaching a gymnastics class, before going onto university.

Rod Strangway

The native of Magnolia, near Entwistle, said his athletic endeavours were "put on hold" for a while for two reasons. The lack of opportunity and also time when he hit the books harder.

In Red Deer they didn't have a gymnastics club so Strangway had to turn to instructing a young class in gymnastics.

"I regret the fact I did not pursue my so-called specialties to see how far I would really go and satisfy myself," he reflected.

But as he pointed out it would have taken a lot of dedication to the sport. Dedication that Strangway instead turned towards the academic side to graduate with honors from university.

Since he came to Drayton Valley Strangway has been heavily involved with the local track team.

"They are a great bunch of kids and the staff is great," he adds.

"Frank Maddock has very nice staff and my stay here has been very enjoyable, they are very pleasant and very helpful."

The school will be without his services next year.

He has taken a teaching position at the Dufield Junior High School near Stony Plain. There he hopes to set up a gymnastics club along with continuing the track and field program.

"Someday I'd like to come back here, there is a lot potential," Strangway says.

The 19th Hole

by Lorne Christensen

A new plaque on the wall at the Drayton Valley golf club honors golfers that sink a hole-in-one. So far only two names have been engraved. The lucky two are Les Bannerman and Brad Turnbull, both shot hole-in-ones in 1984 on the 204-metre second hole.

Just a reminder the ladies will be teeing it up on Saturday at the Drayton Valley golf club in the annual Ladies Open tournament. The juniors will be on the course the following weekend for their tournament and they are still looking for more entries.

The new artificial greens at the Pembina Valley golf course in Evansburg look impressive. A company called OmniSport from Toronto just installed the greens and they are getting a good workout from the area golfers.

One in particular, Dale Law, shot a one-over-par round of 35 last week on the new greens. Law missed his last putt or he would have parred the course. Law says it will take about a month for the new greens to be broken in.

Another golfer at Evansburg was enjoying the new greens. George Bentley from Seba Beach said there was "no comparison" between the old sand greens and the new artificial ones.

The Mayerthorpe Golf and Country Club just installed artificial greens up there too. Looks like they are beginning to catch on. But Drayton Valley club players probably won't ever see them here.

Club pro Howard Vickers said they weren't considering them for the new nine holes.

The expansion at Drayton Valley is going ahead. An architect has been called in and he is studying the course. According to club president Les Bannerman the club has a verbal agreement for the adjacent airport land to be used by the club.

Expansion of course isn't the only thing happening at the local club. The new golf cart shed is taking shape. Only a few things remain to be done on the shed and it will be ready for the carts.

Soap box derby

Drayton Valley boy wins class

Terry Regenwetter from Drayton Valley was the only local winner at the Parkland County soap box derby on the weekend.

Regenwetter won the 10- to 12-year-old class with his time of 21.44 seconds on the rain-slicked course.

Second in the class was Scott Franchuk of Spruce Grove with a time of 22.73 seconds and third went to Stony Plain's Carson Wyndham with a time of 23.73 seconds.

In the six- to nine-year-old group the winner was Trevor Whorpole from Spruce Grove with a time of 22.59. Second went to Jordan Smith from Edmonton with a time of 23.03 while his brother Corey came in third at 23.17 seconds.

In the 13-and-over category the winner was Cathy Schultz from Stony Plain with a time of 22.29 seconds. Second went to Richard Schoepp from Winterburn with his 22.54 time and third to Angie Zomeran from Stony Plain with a time of 22.73 seconds.

The best designed vehicle went to Spruce

Land Radiator and the best appearance to the Crush team from Cochrane.

Eighty-seven participants came from as far away as Cochrane, Red Deer and Leduc to participate.

Money needed

The Drayton Valley recreation board wants to form a sports council.

The recreation board hopes that groups and organizations and the town would contribute funds to the sports council on a yearly basis, then a council would make decisions as to who would get financial help from the fund.

A general meeting will be held in the near future inviting interested clubs to meet with the recreation board to discuss the possibilities of such a council for sports.

Freda Batke at work in the golf course kitchen.

Golf course kitchen busy

Freda Batke spends a lot of her time at the Drayton Valley golf course.

But don't get the wrong idea, she is the manager of the kitchen and bar in the clubhouse.

It's been almost exactly a year since Batke took over the job of managing the 104-seat dining area.

She describes the people that come to the clubhouse as one "big family."

But she also points out that anyone is welcome to come out to the club for either the smorgs on Tuesdays and Thursdays or the lunches on other week days.

She adds that it is mainly golfers that cater to the clubhouse but other people are welcome.

Batke says they average about 35 people for their lunches and smorgs a day but on league nights they have a lot more.

She explains that her work is made easier by the "well-planned" kitchen and the 16 full- and part-time staff that work under her.

Batke also points out that they try to keep the food like home cooking, which could be one of the reasons the club is such a popular place to eat.

From the end of November right up to Christmas last year the clubhouse was booked up with private parties.

Several people have already inquired about next year, Batke says.

But the clubhouse has more to offer than just homecooking and a bar. A dance floor in the dining area makes the clubhouse even more appealing to groups wishing to hold functions.

Recreation Board

Meetings go on

The Drayton Valley recreation board will not be taking any summer holidays.

The board decided last week to hold regular monthly meetings in July and August as scheduled.

A motion to miss the August meeting and hold two meetings in September was defeated.

The recreation board is scheduled to meet July 3 and Aug. 14.

Junior golfers badly needed

If you're young and you're a swinger you qualify.

The Drayton Valley golf club is holding its annual Junior Open tournament on June 29 and is looking for entries.

The deadline to enter the 18-hole event is June 21.

They are hoping to have at least 40 golfers, according to one of the organizers Ernie Malanowich.

"We'd like to have as many juniors as possible," he added.

Entries are being taken by club pro Howard Vickers and he is also looking to have about 40 juniors participate.

"We are looking for lots of entries all ages and all abilities," Vickers said.

Last year only 24 juniors entered the tournament but this year's entries should be up, if the prizes are any indication.

A draw will be held from all the names entered and the winner gets a $300 set of irons, second in the draw gets a $160 set of woods and the third name drawn will receive $50 in club covers and a bag.

Tournament winners will also receive trophies and organizers plan to have a hamburger and hot dog stand on the second hole of the course.

The fathers will be serving the meal sponsored by Ben's Meats, Coca-Cola and the Drayton Valley bakery.

New slowpitch league

Plans are being made for a new slowpitch league during the summer months.

Stan Zimmerman, who organized the last league, says the new league will start playing the first week in July.

Zimmerman added that he has 18 teams signed up for sure and is expecting to get as many as 24 teams.

July 1 is the cut off date for entries in the new league and Zimmerman hopes to have the schedule drawn up shortly afterwards.

The first league had 16 teams that participated and Zimmerman points out they "had nothing but fun."

He also added that the league was "pretty well balanced."

Anyone interested in participating in the new league can reach Zimmerman at 542-5020. In addition if any individual wants to play on a team they can contact Zimmerman who will try to get them on a team.

Bud raft wins

The Budweiser team from Drayton Valley finished first in the first annual Pembina River raft race on the weekend.

The raft with Pat and Dean Mulgrew, Trevor Ceh, Mike Eshpeter, and Cindy Denoncourt completed the one-mile course in about 25 minutes.

They were followed by the Evansburg fire department raft that took second and the Peg & Con's raft of Evansburg finished third.

The best overall raft trophy went to the Peg & Con's entry.

A total of eight rafts braved the rain to race while the canoe portion of the event was cancelled due to the weather.

Wetaskwin meet

The Neptune swim club competed in a meet in Wetaskwin last Saturday in their first competition of the season.

Nine clubs from Provost, Wainwright, Camrose, Lacombe, Red Deer, Stony Plain, Forestburg, Wetaskwin and Drayton Valley competed. Drayton Valley sent 26 of their 48 members to the meet.

Stony Plain won the event and received a trophy for their efforts. Ribbons were given to the top six in each event.

A total of 21 of the Neptunes received ribbons in their events.

The next meet for the Neptune members is in Devon this Sunday.

Lots of Beaver action in town

The Drayton Valley Vacuum beaver baseball team came from behind to edge out the Warburg Legion Elks 15-13 recently.

After two innings of play the Warburg squad held a commanding 10-5 lead. But Drayton Valley came back in the next three innings to within one and didn't allow Warburg to score.

Then in the sixth Warburg picked up three runs, but that was all they could get. Drayton Valley went on to get two runs in the sixth and four in the seventh to win.

Pitching on both sides was excellent with Shaun Tucker picking up the win for the Drayton Valley team. Tucker pitched the last inning and got three outs while walking one.

The Drayton Valley Legion Blues dumped the Warburg Elks 17-7 in beaver baseball action.

Behind the strong pitching and hitting of Brett Schwartz and the strikeouts by reliever Garry Mastre the Blues were able to defeat Warburg.

David Geddes, David Frost and Jordan Boushard also helped lead the team's offence in the victory.

In other beaver action the Legion Blues beat Valley Vacuum 20-18.

Flyers downed by Rowdies

The Blackhawks remain in first place in the ball hockey league after a win and a tie in play last week.

The Blackhawks blanked the Oilers 1-0 and then tied 3-3 with the Redskins to hold onto first place by one point.

The Rowdies with 22 points overall are in second after they clobbered the Flyers 11-0 and tied with the Redskins 4-4.

Grey sits in third place overall after two wins last week with a 4-1 victory over the Flyers and a 7-3 win against the Oilers.

The previous week's action saw the Blackhawks win two in edging the Redskins 7-6 and the Rowdies 8-2. The Rowdies dumped the Oilers 10-6 last week to help their record.

In other play Grey beat the Flyers 5-2 and got by the Oilers 4-3 while the Redskins beat the Flyers 5-2.

The Redskins are in fourth with 19 points overall, just one behind Grey. Trailing the league is the Oilers with six points and the Flyers with four.

Watrich in top 100

Drayton Valley's Rick Watrich finished in the top 100 at the Canadian championship marathon run held on the weekend in Winnipeg.

Watrich ran a personal best time of 3 hours and 10 minutes with the winner of the event completing the 26 mile race in 2 hours and 18 minutes.

Brenda Prentice, also from Drayton Valley, ran her very first marathon in a time of 8 hours and 41 minutes in the event.

Watrich will not know for sure his exact placing until later this week but he did finish in the top 100 out of the 800 runners that competed.

He plans to compete in another marathon in Richmond, B.C. in the fall.

Trees sprout lead

The Den-Co Trees are still leading the Evergreen fastball league with an impressive 15 win and two-loss record.

Den-Co blanked the Wildcats 5-0 and 7-0 in addition to beating Breton 6-1.

Penney's is sitting 3½ games back in second after they beat the Wildcats 4-1, Sardine Lake 6-2 and then blanked Lodgepole 7-0.

Two teams, the Knights and Breton, are tied for third 4½ games back after Breton beat the Knights 9-7.

Pembina Valley put in artificial grass

New artificial grass greens have been installed at the Pembina Valley golf course at Evansburg.

A $50,000 park development grant from the provincial government assisted with the installation.

Pembina Valley is the second course in Alberta to install the artificial grass greens. The first was at Mayerthorpe and others at Fox Creek and Grande Prairie are also interested.

Dwayne Koetze, caretaker at Pembina Valley is excited about the new greens. His job will be much easier with the installation of the new greens by Omnisport of Toronto.

There's very little maintenance and the weather doesn't hurt them at all.

Omnigreen is a green shag carpet about three-quarters of an inch thick. After a separate base is put down, the Omnigreen is set in place. Then sand is dumped on to within two-sixteenths of an inch of the top of the Omnigreen. The sand doesn't come in contact with the ball, it is used to keep the fibres in place and provide a cushion — so balls don't hit and bounce over the green.

While the greens require very little maintenance, the Pembina Valley caretaker changes the position of the cups every Friday. There are two cups for the first eight holes and three for the ninth.

Ernie Eves is one Evansburg golfer who likes the addition of the artificial grass greens.

"It's a big improvement. The ball runs the same as grass in many respects," Eves says.

Kelly takes over

Chris Kelly is the new chairman of the Drayton Valley recreation board.

Kelly takes over from Jane Kwas who is leaving Drayton Valley shortly for Calgary where her husband has taken employment.

Jack Hutchinson is the board's new vice-chairman and Larry Poppenroth will represent the recreation board at council meetings when Kelly or Hutchinson are not available.

Mayor Bob Mayhew extended a vote of thanks to Kwas last week for her volunteer contribution to the recreation board and the community.

"There's more of a challenge," he added. It only took a week to install the Omnigreen, which has been approved by the PGA as an acceptable putting surface.

Activities planned for Hire-A-Student

If you want to see Hire-A-Student in action, the manager will be serving during coffee hour today (Wednesday) at the Drayton Valley Bakery.

Heather Parker said she is doing this as part of Hire-A-Student Week in Drayton Valley.

Also scheduled is a job-finding challenge between Charlie Minor, Alex Salfi, Chad Nichols and Parker.

For one hour, these four will be phoning local business to see who can find the most jobs for the students.

The winner of the challenge will get a free half-day of labor from a student, Parker said.

"I would send him on employer visits," commented Parker on the idea of what she would do if she won the challenge.

Later this week, the Hire-A-Student centre will be having a display at the Derrick Mall. At the display, a draw will be made for another free half-day of labor.

Included at the display will be a draw for the employer of the week.

Parker says the centre is finding a lot of jobs this year.

"We're doing pretty good. We're up from last year, Parker commented. She added the oil industry seems to be hiring more this year.

Lone Pine takes over from Daines

There's a new western wear store in Drayton Valley.

Walter and Shirley Ditchuk of Tomahawk have opened Lone Pine Western Wear in the Dodson Mall.

"I always wanted to get into this line, but there was always a western store in Drayton Valley," Walter Ditchuk explains.

When Daines closed their doors the Ditchuks jumped at the opportunity and opened Lone Pine Western Wear, located at the south end of the Dodson Mall between Penny's Drugs and Fields.

Lone Pine Western Wear has everything for mom, dad and the kids.

Their impressive stock includes Wrangler, MWG and Craven in men's and ladies' shirts; Boulet and Don Quijote boots; winter and summer jackets by Mercury; men's and ladies' Lee and Wrangler jeans and ladies' stretch Wranglers; Smithbilt felt and straw hats; children's wear and King ropes.

A line of tack has also been added to the stock. "We'll carry what every person wants," Walter Ditchuk says.

"We can compete with city prices," he added. In August Ditchuk will take in a fashion show in Calgary, at which time he will look to increasing his stock.

"We will carry more stock as time progresses," Ditchuk stated.

"And we plan to carry top quality lines. Nothing but the best," he says.

Both Walter and Shirley Ditchuk were born and raised in the Tomahawk area.

When they're not working at Lone Pine Western Wear time is spent at their farm near Tomahawk, where they raise purebred Arabian horses. Years ago they also raised purebred Angus cattle but are out of that today.

For a complete line of western wear stop in and see Walter and Shirley Ditchuk at Lone Pine Western Wear, in Drayton Valley's Dodson Mall. Or call 542-6964.

Directors job gets 30 applicants

A Drayton Valley applicant appears to be in the running for the vacant recreation director's job.

Town manager Manny Deol told the recreation board last week that 30 applications had been received and one of those was from someone within the recreation department.

Mayor Bob Mayhew, who stated he was unhappy with all the criticism being levelled against the town over the long list of recreation directors they had gone through, said he was sympathetic with the local applicant.

When Dennis Woolsey was suddenly handed his walking papers at the end of April, he was the town's eighth recreation director in 10 years.

The mayor also indicated that maybe it wasn't necessary to get someone with a lot of experience as opposed to someone who would fit into the local system.

50th Avenue Plans redone for town

Some replanning has been required for the reconstruction of 50th Avenue in Drayton Valley.

Marvin Moore, Minister of Transportation in Alberta, told a luncheon in Drayton Valley last week bids on a tender to re-lay 50th Avenue from 50th Street to the highway and to reconstruct 50th Avenue from the highway west, through Poplar Ridge, came in a little high.

To bring costs back down, planned realignment of Industrial Road by 50th Avenue and some storm sewers are not going to be done, according to Manjeet Saran, the town engineer.

However, he said there will be storm sewer put in from Industrial road to the highway as well.

On the other side of the highway, 50th Avenue will be reconstructed as it is only on a gravel base at this time. As well, sewer and water will be going to Poplar Ridge.

Saran expects construction to begin about the end of July, and "October 30 is the completion date at this point of time."

Drayton Valley makes good

Drayton Valley has come a long way, according to Marvin Moore, Minister of Transportation in Alberta.

At a luncheon meeting last week, Moore related how several years ago, while he was Minister of Municipal Affairs, he had come to Drayton Valley to stress the need for tightening up the financial problems of the town.

Tourist guide placemats are ready

The Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce tourist committee has just completed a new four-color place mat.

The place mat, available to eating establishments, includes campgrounds, fishing spots, golf courses, airports, major highways and points of interest.

One individual who gave up many hours of his own time to the map project was Clarence Tsal.

The Sankatoon, Sask. native is an administrative analyst (in the producing department) with Amoco.

After graduating from the University of Lethbridge Tsal joined Amoco, a job which brought him to Drayton Valley in May of '82. A year later he married Lynette, also a Lethbridge resident, who had attended the University of Lethbridge.

Both Clarence and Lynette Tsal lead a very athletic life in Drayton Valley.

People

He is a fullback with Ceasars' entry in the senior men's soccer league, enjoys golfing, played two seasons in the recreation hockey league and took up cross-country skiing last winter.

Lynette Tsal, who works at the Toronto Dominion Bank, helped the Tigars ladies basketball team to the provincial championship earlier this year.

Besides his work on the chamber's map project and the many sports he enjoys, Tsal is also a member of the Elks and Legion clubs in town.

"I volunteered for the map project and enjoy getting involved in the community," Tsal explains.

Travels the farmer's market circuit

Unique idea transforms blades into clocks

By Lorne Christensen

Karl Rahner's clocks are a cut above the rest. The reason is simple, they are made out of old saw blades.

Rahner takes old saw blades and transforms them into works of art by either painting them or covering them with pictures.

The native of Germany travels the local farmer's market circuit selling his "unique" product.

Rahner says he travels to the markets in Hinton, Edson, Seba Beach and Alberta Beach once every two weeks and comes to the Drayton Valley farmer's market every week for the last six to seven years.

The reason he doesn't go every week to the markets is, because he needs the time to produce more clocks.

It takes about seven days from start to finish to produce one of the clocks. First the picture or painting is applied, then the numbers are put on.

He displays his clocks like this at several of the area markets.

Rahner points out some of the finer details of his work to Betty Saumer from Kamloops, B.C.

After this Rahner can put on a glaze finish, which takes several more days to dry.

He can either put a picture on the clock or paint a scene on it and if he paints the clock he says he can do two in a day.

He uses either acrylic or oil paints but points out that acrylics dry faster, making it possible to sell the clocks sooner.

Most of his clocks sell for between $25 and $45 depending on the size of the blade used. But considering that materials alone for each clock cost around $15 he is not getting much for his time and effort.

If he can make a dollar an hour for his handiwork he is doing good, he says.

Some days he sells several clocks but at other times nobody wants one he explained.

"It would be nice if it was spread out a little bit," he adds in pointing out that in one afternoon this year he sold 30 clocks.

But for the former construction worker, who now lives in Millet, selling his unique clocks has become a full-time job.

"If I didn't have my talents I don't know what I'd do," he said, "I have to keep on going."

He was forced to turn to making the clocks because of his "state of health." Rahner, who came to Canada 33 years ago, has had five heart attacks.

Because of this he decided to turn to his painting talents and began painting saw blades about 10 years ago.

"It wasn't my idea to put in the clocks," Rahner said, "it was a lady here in Drayton Valley that suggested it."

"When they first came out people laughed, now they have gotten over it," he said, "at first they thought they were molds."

"People don't know how pretty they look hanging on the wall," Rahner says of his creations.

But now his clocks grace the walls of many homes. People from as far away as Switzerland and Norway have bought clocks at the local markets according to Rahner.

One reason his saw blade clocks have become so popular is the prices, they haven't changed since he started making the clocks.

"Nobody every told me about inflation," he laughed.

Peat is not a problem

Forage Association promotes pasture program in area

Finding practical applications for peat moss is only part of the job for manager Laurel MacDonald of the West Central Forage Association.

"Most people think peat is useless," commented the 24-year-old University of Manitoba graduate.

The association has successfully started a plot of grasses in peat, which has been "established really well," she said.

One of the problems they had to overcome was the acidity of some peat. Finding plants which can take the acidity was one important step. Because peat is light and airy, it soaks up water like a sponge, but also is the first to dry up, said

MacDonald.

"We used a land roller to firm up the seed bed," she explained, reducing the problems.

Another of the projects the association is involved in is a rotational grazing program. The association started the project in 1983, leasing 145 acres of land which they divided into 10 paddocks, which were seeded with a variety of grasses and legumes.

There, 21 members of the association have put 181 head of steers which are weighed every month to see how they do.

The steers stay on each paddock for about 12 days, and are moved to the next paddock before it is grazed out. Important points of the project are showing the need to rotate grazing so plants can grow back, and proper handling of the heavy clay soils of the area.

"You have to have proper management for clay soil as you work it completely different from black soil," explained MacDonald.

In all, the association has 16 plots, some of which the organization receives data from, and others it gets heavily involved in, she commented.

"We help out as much as we can. Financially we contribute a percentage to help finance projects," MacDonald stated.

The association has "a little more access to what research is going on and can apply it locally," she explained.

All this keeps her quite active. "I'm really busy...I think I'm going to learn a lot from this job," she commented.

After getting a degree in agriculture, MacDonald headed for Australia where she worked on a few different farms. She described the experience as somewhat "confusing" as they farm year-round.

"Wheat is their winter crop," MacDonald said.

Rec board votes on old pool

The recreation board would like to see the old outdoor swimming pool buildings in Drayton Valley turned into a multi-purpose center. The board, in a 5-1 vote, decided last week to recommend to town council to look at a multi-purpose, or meeting room for the old pool buildings. The pool tank is slated for a creative playground.

Total cost of the project is about $60,000 which, according to town manager Manny Deol, will come from the new Park Valley pool budget.

The recreation board heard last week that a playschool and the pottery club were interested in the old pool building.

But it was the opinion of Deol that meeting rooms were badly needed in the community. Only half of the old pool building would be used for meetings with the town using the other half for storage.

Missing children

Toll free phone line fund

A box of mixed nuts is an odd way to lessen the tragedy of having a child go missing.

But in Drayton Valley and the rest of Alberta, boxes of mixed nuts are being sold in stores which may make a difference.

The Tania Murrell Missing Children's Society in Edmonton is trying to raise funds to establish a toll-free telephone number to aid in efforts to find children who have disappeared.

Inside the box of nuts, bearing Tania Murrell's picture, is a fingerprinting card to have for identifying children, and a fact sheet with information on how to prevent child abduction and what to do if a child should go missing.

Jim Jenks, spokesman for Fund Aid, the organization helping raise money for the phone line, said "There's been a lot of publicity in the United States (about missing children)...it just hasn't got the publicity in Canada."

Jenks commented the local RCMP will help in fingerprinting your child if you have trouble.

He also mentioned how they have employed 85 disabled people in Edmonton for putting the packages together.

From Tomahawk

King retires

Former Tomahawk area farmer Ken King is retiring after more than 30 years with the Municipal District of Stony Plain and Parkland County.

County Administrator Otto Schuster traced the history of King's employment from his early days as a farmer in the district of Tomahawk. The equipment to clear land was not very good in those days and it was difficult to make a living in the area, Schuster said.

King therefore supplemented his income in the 1930s by working for the municipal district.

The going rate in those days was $1 per man per day and $1 per team of horses per day.

King served as a member of the board of trustees in the 1950s.

When the municipal district decided to do a general assessment, King was interested.

The assessment techniques were quite different in those days from what they are now and the general assessment took more than three years.

The assessors walked virtually every square foot of the land they were assessing, Schuster said.

King would come back to the office with stories about being chased by dogs in the farmers' yards and being chased by bulls in their fields.

Whenever the province wanted to test a new assessment technique it was tried first in the Municipal District of Stony Plain, Schuster said.

Provincial officials knew King would get the expected results from the technique.

King spent his recreational time playing ball, hunting and curling.

His recent hobby is horse racing.

King told the people who had gathered to honor him he expects to remain active in his retirement years.

He and his wife have been together for 30 years and will try to make it another 30, he said.

King was presented with a gift of a camera and carrying case.

Entwistle resident

McCracken seldom lonely with bird, dog and cats

By Donna Haukedal

Alma McCracken was born in Sweden in 1901. She came to Canada at the age of four, to her first home near Camrose and then moved to Stony Plain for a short while.

Since the railroad didn't go beyond Edson, her stepfather decided to use his teams of oxen and horses to begin a freight business from Edson into B.C. So the family and the animals were all placed in boxcars for the trip to Edson.

When this venture ended they came back to Stony Plain where Alma's stepfather worked for farmers and in 1911 they moved to Entwistle, once more by boxcar.

Entwistle at that time was east of the present townsite and was a booming community. Lumber, coal and a stone quarry, plus homestead land were attracting people from far and wide.

But the first school was just being built. So

Alma, at age 10, returned to Stony Plain to stay with friends and attend school.

Following school she worked for a time in Stony Plain and then went to Warner, AB to work for the disabled wife of the minister of the Free Evangelical Church.

In 1918 she became their daughter-in-law. Alma and her husband George farmed until the drought of the '30s took its toll. They had a lot of land but the crop just dried up and they weren't even able to get their seed back.

After 14 years on the land they sold it for very little money. "You can't get your money out of it when you've got nothing but Russian thistles and grasshoppers," she says.

So they loaded their four children and other belongings into two wagons and left for Entwistle, where Alma's mother was still living. They "hired one wagon to make a temporary home for the long trip. "The children enjoyed it," she says.

One year after their arrival Alma's mother died. Alma and her family moved to a piece of land south and east of Entwistle in the Brightwood district and George went to work logging.

Another son was born here, but lost his life when he was struck by a train on his way to work. He was 20 years old.

Their two eldest sons went overseas for four years during the war.

At age 54 George was killed when a tree fell on him while he was logging.

Alma lived alone in the country for a time and then moved back to an acreage that she calls old Entwistle (the original townsite). Here she has spent the past 28 years.

For several years she had some cattle, chickens and goats. "I'm used to livestock," she says. "To like it now, but my legs are not so good."

She says she seldom gets lonely. She has a budgie, poodle and two cats to keep her company, plus several family members living nearby who visit and run errands for her.

She attends church in Entwistle, enjoys the radio, some TV, visiting on the telephone and tends her garden.

One son, Bob and his wife, live at Entwistle; a daughter, Marie and her husband live near Tomahawk; son Ed and his wife live at Stony Plain and son Wes and his wife live at Devon. Alma has 13 grandchildren and 35 great grandchildren.

People depended so much on one another in the early days and shared of themselves and any good fortune with their neighbors. Alma says,

"The nicest thing I remember when we came to Entwistle was a black family that took us in until we found a place to live. I thought that was so nice of them, because they didn't even know us."

Groundwater clean in town

Drayton Valley and Calgary have at least one thing in common. Both centres get their groundwater from the Paskapoo Formation.

The difference in the groundwater should make Drayton Valley residents happy.

Calgary's groundwater is contaminated with volcanic ash while water from the depth here in Drayton Valley isn't.

According to Al Strauss, a drilling inspector with Alberta Environment, Drayton Valley residents don't have to worry about the contaminated water reaching their pipes.

"Water movement is from east to west and it doesn't migrate once it's in formation," Strauss explained.

Because of the contamination in the Calgary water they can only get three or four gallons a minute while in Drayton Valley the groundwater can be taken at between 80 to 100 gallons a minute, Strauss added.

By the way, the volcanic ash came from volcanoes on the Washington Plains that erupted 60 million years ago.

Parkland county rejects request

Parkland County has rejected a request for a rebate on taxes paid between 1981 and 1984.

A letter from a resident claimed the county "has been charging us double."

A history of taxes paid during the years in question was provided as proof of the claim.

The letter indicated the taxes assessed for the previous two years were $414. In 1982 the taxes were $378 and for 1981 they were $329.

The resident said the general assessment carried out in the county to provide the basis for this year's taxes is the first time his property was assessed "properly".

During previous assessments no one was home when the assessors came around, he said.

Administrator Otto Schuster told council the county office has received requests for tax rebates from other residents since the tax notices were mailed.

Many people's taxes on residential and farm properties went down this year, he said.

The requests for rebates at the office have been refused.

"We can't begin to entertain these kinds of requests," Schuster said.

When residents aren't home during the time an assessor calls, a note is left instructing them to call the county office, he said.

Residents who weren't satisfied with their assessments had the opportunity to appeal, until the deadline on May 31, to a court of revision.

Council set the dates for this year's court of revisions as July 2, 3, 5, 22, 23, 25, 30 and 31.

Other sessions of the court will be held in Stony Plain although some will be in Drayton Valley.

The court of revision is a quasi-judicial board set up under the authority of the Municipal Government Act to hear assessment appeals.

Intern teachers could be hired if funds available

As many as 30 teacher interns may be hired for the county school system for the 1985-86 school year, provided funds are available.

The interns will be hired under the Initiation to Teaching Project recently announced by Alberta Education.

Under the program 900 Alberta graduates of faculties of education will be hired by local school boards each year for the next two years.

The project is designed to "facilitate the transition from student to professional teacher."

Funding for the project will be provided by Alberta Education and the Alberta Youth Employment and Training Program.

Alberta Education has indicated it will provide a grant to school jurisdictions of up to $5,460 per participant.

Alberta Manpower will provide an additional grant of up to $7,800 per participant.

Local jurisdictions will be responsible for providing $2,340 in order to make up a salary and benefits package of up to $15,600 for the school year.

Eligibility for the project will be limited to individuals who have been Alberta residents for the past three years and who have graduated from an Alberta approved teacher education program during the past 18 months.

Applicants for the position must have been unemployed for four months or employed in positions unrelated to their academic qualifications.

They must have had no previous employment as a full-time teacher and must possess or have applied for an Alberta Interim Professional Teaching Certificate.

Leory Sloan, assistant school superintendent, told the board of education at a meeting on June 4 the county system's first priority will be to provide teaching experience in rural areas.

The teacher intern program could be of assistance particularly in classrooms where there is pressure because of large groupings of students and in classrooms which have combined grades, he said.

In no way is the program designed to replace staff already hired or to take the place of a teacher where the hiring of additional staff is justified, Sloan said.

Where a beginning teacher is the best candidate for an opening they will be hired.

Administration sees the project as mutually beneficial to the interns and the system, he said. The idea is not that the interns will save the county money.

The teacher interns will, however, benefit the system in certain areas and will find the experience beneficial in their own professional development.

Congratulations to Lynn and Bill Thompson on the birth of their baby boy May 27.

The work bee held recently at the Lindale Hall was well attended. With the help of about 30 people the bleachers were completed except for paint, the grass out and the garbage picked up, making a great improvement on the hall grounds. Thank you to all the people who came to help.

The Lindale School track meet went well. The weather was chilly to start but turned nice in the afternoon. Thanks go to all the parents who turned out to help during the day.

The Berrymoor Misfits ball team have played two games and have unfortunately lost both. Better luck in your next game.

The project will also serve as an indication of ability when it comes to recruiting new teachers.

The intern project is supported by the principals' association, Sloan said.

"Very exciting ideas" are being developed at the school level to help fund the intern positions, he said.

Trustees Pearl Nielsen and Cec Dawkins said residents of the county should be given first priority when it comes to hiring the interns.

Dawkins said it is sometimes difficult for local people to break into the system. If they are willing to service in their own communities they should be given the opportunity.

Hiring locally would produce a more stable teaching staff, he said.

Sloan said the administration will take residency into account during hiring but will also be looking for applicants who are good prospects as teachers.

Superintendent of Schools Marv Tkachuk said the county system may have difficulty acquiring the number of teacher interns desired.

Other jurisdictions will be competing for eligible candidates and the "subsistence salary" will make it difficult for applicants to commute to a job.

Teacher workshops on fitness

The county parks and recreation department tentatively plans to offer fall workshops for teachers interested in using health and fitness information, says the director.

Barb Smith says Feelin' Good Program kits

Hints N' Things

Springtime joy

By Gerry Fisher

- Oh, the joy that springtime brings — the charm of green and growing things, the gentle stir of robins' wings, the daylight lingering to stay.
- Place a piece of screening under your registers. It prevents things from falling down the registers and collects dust and dirt, making them easier to clean.
- To get rid of chewing gum, even in the hair, put the white of an egg on it and leave it for a few minutes.
- Count your age by friends — not years. Count your life by smiles — not tears.
- Line the shelves of your medicine cabinet with blotting paper. This deters the noise of bottles, catches all the drips and is easily replaced when soiled.
- Have trouble threading a needle? Hold the needle against a white background or slip a piece of white paper behind your sewing machine needle. Works great!
- Entirely too many meetings open at 7:30 sharp and end at 10:30 dull.
- Fill a large mug with chicken broth and bean sprouts for a filling, yet dietetic "chicken noodle" soup.
- You can't blame anyone but yourself if you stumble twice over the same stone.

are available in the interim through the department office.

The kits were used as a basis for a Parkland Participates program which was offered through the department in county schools during the past school year.

More than half the schools in the county system took part in the program.

Of the 18 schools involved, seven were from the rural districts and 11 from the urban centres.

Smith told members of the parks and recreation board at a meeting on June 3 teachers were unanimous in their approval of the program.

In a report presented to the board, Lorraine Glass, the fitness project co-ordinator hired by the department to run the program, recommended a follow-up program to the one carried out this year.

The objective of Parkland Participates was to increase the level of awareness, interest and participation in health and fitness activities in the county, Glass said.

"The project aims to direct a larger population of school children into a healthier, more active lifestyle," she said.

Over the three-month period in which the program was offered, 3,968 students took part in 161 sessions.

Glass recommended the county purchase or locate a heart monitor and a number of stethoscopes for use throughout the school year.

"Equipment that offers audio and visual assistance can only produce faster learning results," she said.

She also suggested a second program during the next school year to give schools who did not take part in the program this year the opportunity to participate.

County of Parkland

Search is underway for youth advisory committee

Parkland County parks and recreation board is still looking for young people interested in becoming members of its newly formed Youth Advisory Committee.

Mary Ann Byusen, east area co-ordinator for the parks and recreation department, says any youth in Divisions 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 who would like to become involved should contact the parks and recreation office.

The advisory committee has five members from Division 1, two from Division 2 and one each from Divisions 3, 4, 5 and 7.

The board is looking for at least two members from each division.

Since many of the recreational programs and projects undertaken by the board are aimed at youth, the advisory committee is intended to ensure the programs are meeting the needs of the people they are intended to serve.

Representing Division 1 on the advisory committee are Heather Gomme, Carmen Klann, Robin Matke, Kim Sinclair and Kathy Sparks.

Members of the committee from Division 2 are Josie Freitag and Toni Topilka.

Ken Palmer is the member from Division 3, Lisa Schultz from Division 4, Trudy Carnegie from Division 6 and Molly Davis from Division 7.

The committee's first session was primarily an opportunity for members to get to know each other and to exchange information, Byusen said.

The members discussed some of the events they'd like to see organized before the end of the year.

The ideas were narrowed down to four possibilities for the time being.

The committee will take these ideas back to their constituencies for feedback in discussions with other teens in order to determine if the projects are realistic and if they would be supported, Byusen said.

At its next meeting on June 18, the committee will discuss the feedback received and will draw up a calendar of events.

The proposed teen jamboree, initially planned for the summer, has been set back to mid-September in order to allow the committee more time to get acquainted and to plan, Byusen said.

Norquays visit Seba Beach for scrabble

By Edith Norquay

On June 3 the Norquays made a trip to Seba Beach where the Zone 5 scrabble games were held. Winners will go on to Barrhead for the mini-games.

They had a tour of Seba Beach and visited the new addition at the Deep-In Centre and thrift shop. The card and pool rooms were left from the old building. There is lots of space in the new games room for carpet bowling, floor curling, dinking, and a craft room, too.

Just before we left, Olive Joun, Frances Sims, Marj Brennan and Mary Bailey arrived. They had just come from looking things over at Barrhead.

On June 6 a group of 31 seniors, 14 from the Shangri-La Lodge and the rest from the Wishing Well, returned from a very enjoyable trip to Victoria, B.C. They went by bus and toured Victoria and Kelowna and other places of interest.

On June 6 a group from the seniors club and others went to Easyford Park for a picnic. There was an egg race, won by Helen Schipper and Jock Hutchinson. Jessie Bartlett won the bean-guessing contest with a guess of 560. There were 558. Some played horseshoes, lawn darts, croquet and crib.

Get well wishes to all those in the hospital. Get well soon and enjoy the weather with us.

Reeve elected region rep

The reeve of the county has been elected by council to represent Parkland on the recently established Capital Region Sewage Commission.

Maurice McCullagh will join representatives from the Cities of Leduc and St. Albert, the Towns of Beaumont, Fort Saskatchewan, Spruce Grove and Stony Plain, the Counties of Leduc and Strathcona and the Municipal District of Sturgeon on the commission established by Alberta Municipal Affairs Minister Julian Koziak.

"Municipal co-operation was instrumental in developing an acceptable proposal that will provide an efficient sewage treatment system for the 10 municipalities in the greater Edmonton area at the most economic cost," Koziak said.

In announcing the formation of the commission, Koziak said a "state of the art" treatment facility constructed at a cost of $57.9 million is now operational.

Transmission lines from the member municipalities have been completed or are presently under various stages of construction.

"Once fully operational, all the residents of the region will benefit from modern sewage treatment and improved water quality in the North Saskatchewan River," Koziak said.

The west leg of the system serving Parkland County and the Towns of Stony Plain and Spruce Grove is in the advanced construction phase.
